Democratic House leaders say they intend to revise the tariff this session of Congress. Their plan, which is not disclosed, may be a horizontal general reduction, rather than a revision schedule by schedule, which would presumably be preceded by extended hearings. Senate Democrats are said to have a plan to reduce the tariff on cement, lumber and sugar.

The present tariff on cement does not measure the difference in labor costs between Belgium and the United States, and therefore does not fulfill the pledge of either political party to bridge in tariff rates the difference in labor standards between this and competing countries. Wages in Philadelphia, according to a report of the Department of Labor, are more than three times as great in purchasing power as wages in Brussels. Belgian cement is moved to our seaboard with little cost, carrying a low water freight; often serving as ballast. The freight from Belgium to our seabord is less than the cost of a short haul from interior points. On the other hand rail freight rates do not permit competition of Belgian cement in the middle west. American cement production has been displaced in some cases, however, by Belgian cement at points in Pennsylvania. The reduction of the cement tariff could have only one effect, and that is to add to unemployment in the United States by giving an unfair advantage in our markets to the cheap labor output of Belgium and Germany.

More than a third of a million workers are jobless in our timber areas in this country because of the present inadequate lumber tariff. A small lumber tariff was imposed over the protest of the lobby representing American lumbermen who have large timber holdings in Canada, where half of the labor in this industry is Asiatic. Scandinavian and Russian lumber interests also fought protection for the American industry. The result was that an adequate tariff was fixed, and this only on certain classes of lumber. Lumber prices in the United States are controlled by foreign producers and at a level which has strangled the timber industry in this country.

Pressure for reduction of the sugar tariff is due to the fact that several of the larger New York bankers are heavily involved in investments in sugar plantations and centrals in Cuba. Their desire is to have greater control of the American sugar market to the displacement of our own domestic cane and beet sugar production, which furnishes employment to thousands of American workers and an outlet for farm production. It will be remembered that predictions were made by those opposing the increase in the sugar tariff given in the present law, that the additional cost of sugar would place a heavy burden on the American consumer. However, sugar has been sold in this country at lower prices than have been known since colonial days during the past 18 months. The increase in tariff on raw sugar in the present tariff law is about ten per cent.

The sugar industry in this country already faces a serious situation, endangering the present employment and investment in the industry. It has been attacked from several directions. For the first time in the history of the country refined sugar was placed on the new tariff practically on a free trade basis. Importations of refined sugar from the raw sugar producing countries have been enormously increased. England and Canada have increased thei ralready high tariff on sugar, while France has practically prohibited the import of sugar from non-French sources. The result has been to turn the sugar production of the whole world on the American market. Under the leadership of a New York lawyer, Mr. Chadbourne, an effort has been made to get the sugar producers of the world together and limit production, but this has failed. Already the United States is the dumping ground of the world's sugar, and the price makes the domestic industry unprofitable. On top of all this the department of justice is proceeding against the sugar institute, an organization of domestic sugar producers operating on a trade agreement said to have been approved by the government when it was made. It seems, however, that the Senate Democrats are not satisfied. They are planning to hit this domestic industry another blow, and destroy whatever employment it still affords to American workers. The inspiration of this course comes from foreign and internationalized banking and industrial circles, whose activities were clearly visible when the present tariff law was being framed.

What the American people want brought about is not the further sacrifice of American to foreign interests, not the further tearing down of our economic defenses, but a policy of looking out for the American people, and the protection of their employment and standards of living. The Democratic leaders in Congress who are proceeding on the theory that Americans want more, rather than less, Anti - American legislation, more, not less attack on American payrolls and wage standards, seem to have little comprehension of public sentiment.

BASKETBALL FANS SEE FAST GAMES AT CAMPBELL HI

Friday evening at the local gymnasium the Campbell hoopsters played the Live Oak teams of Morgan Hill. Both games were fast and exciting. The Campbell 130s won their turn 12-4, while the unlimiteds were not so fortunate. At the end of the first half the score stood 12-12 and remained even up until the last few minutes of play when the Acorns tossed two field goals in succession, bringing the game to a close with the score 18-16 in their own favor.

Fouling was a major consideration of the game, with George Shank taken out on fouls, which crippled the local quint to some extent.

Next games are scheduled for Friday, Jan. 22, with Santa Clara at Santa Clara.

The fire department was called out Thursday morning when smoke was seen issuing from the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Perrott. The smoke was in the attic and there was no fire. False alarm and the fire trucks were out on time as usual.

Congress Approving the President's Rehabilitation Program Step by Step—Oliver Wendell Holmes Resigns From the Supreme Court.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONLY eight senators out of 81 voting opposed the passage in the senate of the administration's bill creating a reconstruction finance corporation that will extend $2,000,000,000 credit to banks, insurance companies, railroads, mortgage loan companies, farm credit and other associations. A similar measure was rushed rapidly through the house, and before the close of the week President Hoover had the satisfaction of signing the act embodying his most ambitious plan for the financial rehabilitation of the country.

Senator E. D. Smith

Debate of the measure in the senate was chiefly over proposed amendments, many of which were offered and few were chosen. The most important amendment adopted was proposed by Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina. It added a new section to the bill authorizing an appropriation of $50,000,000 for use by the secretary of agriculture to extend loans to small farmers. It stipulated further that the $45,000,000 now remaining in the drought relief fund should be applied to such loans.

During the discussion there were frequent and fierce attacks on the banking interests, especially those of the "international" variety which are being accused of questionable methods and ethics in the flotation of foreign securities in the United States.

The eight men who refused to vote for the bill were all from the western states. They were Norris of Nebraska, Brookhart of Iowa, and Blaine of Wisconsin, all "progressive" Republicans, and Bratten of New Mexico, Bulow of South Dakota, Connally of Texas, McGill of Kansas, and Thomas of Oklahoma, all Democrats.

PROCEEDING with the economic program, the senate put through the bill increasing the resources of the federal land banks by $125,000,000. Meanwhile subcommittees began hearings on the $150,000,000 home loan discount bill and the $750,000,000 depositors' relief bill.

The senate finance committee continued the taking of testimony relating to the deals of our international bankers in foreign securities, and it was often most interesting. For instance, it was brought out that Secretary of State Stimson and Francis White, assistant secretary, took an active part in ironing out an alleged misunderstanding between the Colombian government and a syndicate headed by the National City company, which early in 1931 temporarily withheld a payment of $4,000,000 on a $20,000,000 credit arrangement. Also, Oliver C. Townsend, formerly commercial attache in Peru, said he was severely reprimanded for making a pessimistic report on the financial status of Peru when that country was trying to float a large loan in the United States. The State department defends its actions in the instances in question.

NEARLY ninety-one years old and growing feeble physically, Oliver Wendell Holmes voluntarily brought to an end his service of 30 years as associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. The venerable and beloved jurist sent his resignation to President Hoover, who reluctantly accepted it, writing: "I know of no American retiring from public service with such a sense of affection and devotion of the whole people." Only the day before Mr. Justice Holmes had rendered a decision with characteristic pithy phrasing, but his voice wavered and he had to be helped from the bench and into his automobile. So he penned his letter of resignation, closing: "The time has come, and I bow to the inevitable."

Justice O. W. Holmes

There were many suggestion for a successor to Justice Holmes, among them being: Newton D. Baker, Wilson's secretary of war; Curtis D. Wilbur, Coolidge secretary of the navy; William Dewitt Mitchell, Hoover's attorney general; John W. Davis, 1924 Democratic Presidential candidate; William S. Kenyon, judge Eighth district United States Circuit court; Robert Von Moschzisker, former chief justice of the Supreme court of Pennsylvania; Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, chief judge Court of Appeals, New York, and Learned Hand, Judge Second district, United States Circuit court. Middle westerners put forward also the name of James H. Wilkerson of Chicago, who about the same time was elevated by the President from the district court to the federal Circuit Court of Appeals.

WHEN Gen. Charles G. Dawes informed the press that he would retire from the ambassadorship to Great Britain after the disarmament conference gets under way, he created a great flurry among the minor politicians, some of whom assumed that he was putting himself in line for the Republican Presidential nomination if the opponents of Mr. Hoover could prevail. But the general put an end to such speculation in just such a statement as might be expected from him. In it he said: "I cherish for President Hoover the highest admiration and deepest affection. Any intimation to the effect that in any possible way or under any possible contingency he will not have my loyal and entire support is an insult to me.

"I find both parties and all the people standing behind a legislative program of reconstruction, which is a common-sense program. It is based upon an old-fashioned idea that our government should always raise the money to pay its expenditures and not borrow it.

"As for President Hoover, whatever may be temporary political reactions—and they are unimportant in such times—he has made a record in Presidential initiative and constructive accomplishment unparalleled in the economic history of this nation or of any other. He has done this without faltering and without discouragement."

RETIREMENT of Dwight F. Davis from the position of governor general of the Philippine islands had been long expected, for Mrs. Davis is in ill health and cannot live in the tropics. President Hoover promptly sent to the senate the name of Theodore Rooseveit, governor of Porto Rico, as the successor to Mr. Davis, and the selection, also no surprise, was generally commended. Colonel Roosevelt, son of the former President, is forty-four years old and has made an excellent record as governor of Porto Rico, where he has been since 1929. He was assistant secretary of the navy from 1921 to 1924, in the latter year being the Republican candidate for governor of New York, but was defeated. His war service included participation in practically all the offensive operations of the A. E. F.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt

Roosevelt's successor in Porto Rico is likely to be James R. Beverly, attorney general and second ranking officer in the island government.

SPEAKING of resignations, it may be recorded right here that James A. Farrell resigned the presidency of the United States Steel corporation effective April 18. He has held the position since 1911 and would be retired automatically in February, 1933, but says he believes "the time has now arrived for my successor to be appointed in order to establish the management upon a more permanent foundation composed of younger men." Mr. Farrell will remain on the board of directors.

THOSE Democrats who oppose the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Presidency felt they had gained a point when the national committee sold the natoinal convention to Chicago. "Sold" is the right word, for the prize was frankly awarded to the city that would guarantee the most money for the convention's expenses. The Chicagoans offered $200,000 outright. The opening date is June 27.

RETURNING to the doings of congress: The house ways and means committee began its hearings preliminary to drafting a bill for increase of taxes. Secretary Mellon of the treasury and Undersecretary Mills were called to explain their department program, which is designed to raise a billion dollars in revenue by boosting income rates all along the line and by levying taxes on many things the ordinary citizen enjoys—automobiles, amusements, radio—as well as such conveniences as bank checks and telephone and telegraph messages.

The judiciary committee of the house has before it the resolution of Representative Wright Patman of Texas for impeachment of Secretary Mellon. The Texan set forth his charges of "high crimes and misdemeanors" based on Mr. Mellon's alleged connection with business in violation of law. The secretary was represented by Alexander W. Gregg, former solicitor of the internal revenue bureau.

MRS. HATTIE W. CARAWAY of Arkansas, widow of Senator T. H. Caraway, is now a senator in her own right, having been elected to that high post by the people of her state. She is the first woman ever elected to the senate. Her victory at the polls was a foregone conclusion as soon as the Democrats nominated her. There were two "independent" candidates, but they didn't get many votes. Mrs. Caraway made no campaign.

SECRETARY of State Stimson is at peace with Japan again and the incident of the assault on Consul C. B. Chamberlain by Japanese soldiers in Mukden is considered closed with the punishment of those who actually participated in the attack. Tokyo offered also to discipline Major General Ninamiya, commander of the military police, and his subordinate officers, held responsible for the actions of the military police. Punishment of a major general in such cases is rare, and the secretary accepted the other punishments as sufficient and asked remission of the punishment of the general and his subordinates.

C. B. Chamberlain

The neutral commission of investigation fathered by the League of Nations will leave Europe at the end of January for Manchuria, where it will be joined by Gen. Frank R. McCoy, the American member.

ATTORNEY General William D. Mitchell began a searching investigation into the enforcement of criminal laws in Hawaii, with especial reference to the recent killing of a native Hawaiian who had been accused of attacking the wife of a naval officer. Crime conditions in Honolulu are wretched, according to a report of the house naval committee, and some congressmen think it may be necessary to change the organic law of the territory to make the islands safe for white women.

Meanwhile the naval officer concerned, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie; his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and two enlisted men are under charges of having murdered Joseph Kahahawai, one of the men alleged to have attacked Mrs. Massie. The lieutenant indicated that he would be satisfied with a trial in the local court, and though there was opposition to this in navy circles in Washington, Secretary Adams decided that all the defendants should be turned over to the territorial authorities.

Gov. Lawrence Judd called a special session of the territorial legislature to consider Honolulu's crime situation.

LEADERS of the dry forces of the United States, aroused but by no means dismayed by the activities of the wets, held a big five-day conference in Washington to inaugurate what they declare will be a year of "the most intense activity since the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment." These big guns of the Anti-Saloon league and a large number of their adherents made and listened to red hot speeches and laid plans for the 1932 national campaign. They formulated unified action on the proposed resubmission of the dry amendment to the states, which the league opposes, and arranged for public meetings everywhere and the wide circulation of literature.

F. Scott McBride

Most prominent among the speakers and planners in the convention were F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league; Bishop W. N. Ainsworth of Birmingham, Ala.; Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma, Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, Patrick Callahan of Louisville and Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism.

POLITICAL scheming resulted in the upset of the French cabinet and conditions in Paris were described as chaotic. Premier Laval handed to President Doumer the resignations of all the ministers except himself, and tried hard to get the support of the radicals, offering the post of foreign minister to Edouard Herriot. That gentleman declined, stating that his party could not participate in the government until after the spring elections, and so Laval was left no course but resignation. Laval then formed another cabinet from which Briand was omitted. It was assumed that there would be no change in France's foreign policy at the reparations and disarmament conferences.

Recent Lecture Brings Gratifying Sum For Student Loan Fund

Reports from the committees who were in charge of the lecture given recently by Mrs. D. V. Laughlin were made Monday at the business meeting of the Country Woman's club. They showed a gratifying balance of $28.25 to be turned into the student loan fund of the County Federation of Women's Clubs as the donation of the Country Woman's club and the Pundita Circle, these clubs having combined in promoting the entertainment.

Announcements of the County Federation, which appear elsewhere in these columns, were also made.

Mrs. G. W. Page, chairman of the committee for the day, presented Miss Helen Kalas, who sang most charmingly two groups of songs, with Mrs. G. S. Robson, accompanist. The first were old English folk songs, "My Lovely Celia" by Monro, and "Phillis Has Such Charming Graces," Young. The second group included "On the Wild Rose Tree," Rotoli, and Love's In My Heart," Woodman.

Mr. Hugh Gillis, who was to speak on "Modern Drama Since the World War" was unable to be present on account of illness, which interfered too late to secure a substitute speaker. Mrs. E. R. Kennedy selected a short play, "Post Mortems," by Charles Divine, one of the best one-act plays of 1927, which she read.

The other members of the committee, Mrs. G. W. Burrow, Mrs. Emma Dalvit, and Mrs. Florine Peake, assisted by Miss Marian Peake, served tea, coffee and cakes, as a surprise number. The other member of the committee, Miss A. E. Denton, was detained at home to care for her sister, Mrs. Hubbell.

Natural Gas cuts fuel costs

These homes formerly used gas for cooking and water heating and solid fuel for house heating. Then Natural Gas came. It was used for house heating and down went the total cost of fuel.

Many persons, discovering the cheapness of Natural Gas, heat their homes to a greater extent. In such cases, present fuel bills are about the same as when home-owners used gas for cooking and water heating and solid fuels for house heating.

But no matter how you look at the facts, Natural Gas is the cheapest fuel, to say nothing of its cleanliness and convenience.

Ornithologist Honored

The Audubon society was named for John James Audubon, a famous American ornithologist and painter of bird pictures. He was born on the island of Santo Domingo, in the part now known as Haiti, on April 26, 1785. He was taken to France to be educated and emigrated to America when he was eighteen years of age. Nearly his whole life was passed in the United States. He lived in Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Louisiana and New York. He died on January 27, 1851, in New York city.

"Pure" English Defined as of Elizabethan Era

The oft-quoted saying that the purest English is spoken in Dublin, particularly at Trinity college, is of unknown origin, says the Pathfinder Magazine. Inverness, Scotland, and Belfast, Ireland, are often linked with Dublin as places where exceptionally pure and correct English is spoken by the inhabitants. The saying probably means little more than that the common speech in these places contains an unusually large number of Elizabethan words now regarded as "archaic" or "classical" in England and the United States. Speech in small countries or isolated communities seldom changes as rapidly as it does in the more populous centers. Both Dublin and Belfast were settled by colonists from England and the speech of their descendants did not undergo the same development that the language of the parent country did. The English language of the periods of Elizabeth and King James was, as it were, kept in cold storage in Ireland and many words and phrases were retained in everyday speech which became obsolete in England. Thus it happens that the language of Belfast and Dublin more nearly approaches the language in use during England's golden era of literature.

Big Prices for Tiny Shrines

As two small medieval shrines were taken quite casually into a London auction room recently the owner, Maj. H. Chase Meredith, thought that if they brought $5,000 each he would be fortunate. One of them, however, which had been in the old abbey of Malmsbury, drew an exciting opening bid of $5,000 and was eventually sold to a Paris buyer for $45,000. The other, associated with Croyland abbey, went to an English collector for $24,000. Each shrine measured only 12 inches long and 10 inches high.

Local Baseball Team Shares First Honors In Triple-Tie Lead

The Cardinals of Palo Alto defeated the Campbell baseball team 6 to 1 at the local field Sunday afternoon. This game tied up the whole Western League and puts the Merchants, Cardinals and Campbell in the lead. Campbell will play the Cards next Sunday and the winner will play the Merchants for Championship of the league.

For this season Campbell has lost but two games and would have been the uncontested winners but for the last two games. But even with a three-way tie Campbell has the best chance to win the championship.

Fossil Remains Blamed for Defects in Teeth

It is a long call from the mastodons—giant elephants that roamed over North America 50,000 years ago—to the teeth of Arizona school children, but there appears to be a clear connection as reported from the Arizona experiment station of the Department of Agriculture.

A large number of the inhabitants of the village of St. David, Ariz., had a peculiar condition of the teeth known as mottled enamel. This was found in every person whose permanent teeth had been erupted in the locality. It was finally traced to the drinking water, mostly obtained from artesian wells.

Analysis showed this water to contain an abnormal amount of chemical fluorine. The deeper the wells the less fluorine.

Further research in the vicinity revealed deposits of fossilized mastodon bones and tusks. This contained considerable quantities of the rare element. The conclusion was that the long dead animals constituted at least one source of the impurity in the water that affected the children's teeth with a presumably incurable defect.—Detroit News.

Long Welsh Name

Does it not seem curious that any place should be named "Llanfairpullgwyngyllgogerchwyrandrobbwllantysiliogogogoch"? but to a Welshman this is one of the most poetical names on his map. To the stranger who goes there and sees the place it is also a locality of charm and beauty. But the name itself is poetry. Llan is "church." Fair is "of Mary," pull gwyngyll is "the pool of white hazels," goger is "rather near," while chwyran drobwll is "the swift whirlpool" and Tysilio gogo goch is "of Tysilio of the red cave." Is it not, therefore, suggestive of romance and beauty enough to visit the village of the church of St. Mary by the pool of white hazels, near the swift whirlpool of St. Tysilio's church of the red cave?

Friday the Thirteenth Still Considered "Jinx"

With all the wealth of fact and philosophy at his command man continues to be a victim of superstition, forcing himself to accept inconveniences and endure suffering because of a fear complex. The old superstitious fear that Friday is an unlucky day, and if Friday falls on the thirteenth day of the month, it is a jinx filled with danger and probable disaster to mankind, comes into evidence continually in the modern times.

The baseless fear of Friday probably was born of witchery and ignorance, but the fear of the thirteenth day of the month may have had its origin in more modern times. The spread of human intelligence should have eliminated both fears from the minds of man, but it has not.

Recently a great ocean liner was delayed for hours in leaving New York so that the trip might be started on the fourteenth day of the month, and not on Friday, the thirteenth. Officials scoffed at the superstition, but admitted that there had been a clamor from passengers to accept the delay and escape the supposed jinx. There is room for more public education so long as people display this fear complex.—Ohio State Journal.

Foreign Service

The United States foreign service divides its activities roughly into three main categories—protective, advisory and administrative. The protective function safeguards citizens and their legitimate interests in all privileges and rights provided by treaty or conceded by usage. The advisory functions of the foreign service are designed primarily for the benefit of the government of the United States, which constantly requires information from all parts of the world for its guidance in the conduct of its foreign relations. The third main division of the duties laid upon the foreign service is the administration abroad of American laws.

Irate Woman Probably Had Time for Regrets

The bus terminal had been reorganized since the Woman's last trip, but she eventually located her bus, and, having three minutes to spare, paced up and down beside it.

From the waiting room emerged a couple engaged in wordy combat, the husband, as usual, losing in the battle. On and on raged the wife, her spouse meekly following with his arms full of bundles. As she got on the bus, he handed the bundles to her and prepared to turn away.

"Don't you dare to be late for supper!" shrieked his spouse. The unfortunate male, his downcast gaze roving humbly over the bus, started suddenly.

"Lily—" he began.

"Don't you 'Lily' me!" shrieked the woman, starting off again. "You—"

"Lissen a minute!" begged the husband.

"Lissen to you! Every time I lissen—" She finished an irate monologue and disappeared into the bus.

"Lissen," the little man called after her. But she was already seated inside. As the little man made toward the bus it jerked suddenly and drove off, leaving him standing, mouth open.

The Woman met his eyes with an involuntary smile. A slow grin spread over his face.

"Don't that beat all?" he asked the Woman, shrugging his thin shoulders. "I only wanted to tell her she's on the wrong bus!" He chuckled. "I hope she finds out soon. The first stop for that one is Philadelphia. And we live in Long Island!"—New York Sun.

The basking sharks sometimes attain a length of 30 feet or more, but they have very small teeth and their diet consists necessarily of small fishes that travel in shoals and other small soft sea creatures which they take into their huge mouths while lying lazily on the surface of the ocean. This species of shark is hunted for its oil, a large one yielding as much as a ton and a half.
